

Regarding the issue of Number Portability for Cell Phone Customers;
It is incomprehensible to me that after years of allowing the Phone Companies to charge a monthly fee for number portability on land line service where there is virtually NO competition that anyone would consider giving them relief of offering number portability for cell phone users where in fact competition does exist. The lack of portability makes it very difficult and often costly for the consumer to change providers when they deem the service they are receiving to be sub standard. Demand that they provide portability and then the consumer will drive competition, lower pricing, and much better service levels.
